Turnover in town offices

The past year saw a high attrition rate in local municipal offices. By year's end the area's two longest-serving town clerks had both been put out of office, one town manager resigned in the face of criminal charges, another to move on to bigger and better things, one selectman was recalled by voters, and another selectman-recall attempt was launched, faltered and may be revived in the spring.

Merton Brown

The most unexpected and dramatic forced departure was in Bethel, where Merton Brown, who had been town clerk for 20 years, was fired in January by Town Manager Madeleine Henley.

Brown's problems began in October 1995, when he was apprehended by security personnel at Rich's Department Store in Gorham, N.H. and charged with shoplifting a $2.19 battery.

Brown readily admitted the battery was in his pocket when he left the store, but he contended it slipped from his hand into the pocket while he was reaching for change.

He paid for two other batteries, he said, and didn't notice the third was missing until he was confronted by store security.

On Jan. 9, acting on the advice of an attorney, Brown chose not to contest the charge. He pleaded nolo contendere in Gorham District Court to a Class B misdemeanor, was found guilty, and paid a $250 fine.

A nolo plea is not technically an admission of guilt, and it allows the defendant to deny the allegations in other proceedings.

And Brown did deny the allegations, steadfastly maintaining his innocence in spite of a videotape of the incident that even he described as "damaging."

The videotape did indeed prove damaging. After Henley viewed it, she suspended Brown, then, on January 29, fired him.

In a seven-page termination memo, Henley cited the shoplifting

He is expected to face those charges early in the new year.

Liz Lavalette

There was no evidence of serious financial irregularities in Brown's handling of town money in Bethel, but in Greenwood a new town manager resigned after being indicted for embezzling $40,000 while in her previous job.

Liz Lavalette was Greenwood's first town manager. She was hired in March, after Town Meeting voters reaffirmed an earlier decision to switch to a town-manager form of government.

That decision effectively put an end to Phyllis Coolidge's 28-year career as Greenwood's town clerk. She resigned prior to the Town Meeting.

Lavalette's previous employment had been in West Stockbridge, Mass., where she held a number of municipal positions over a period of 18 years.

Other officials in the western Massachusetts town gave her glowing recommendations, and her work in Greenwood was earning her praise, but in December she abruptly resigned her job here -- following news that she had been indicted in Massachusetts on multiple counts of grand larceny, all stemming from her work in West Stockbridge.

Lavalette was replaced by Lloyd Decato, who took the town manager position on an interim basis.

The town selectmen have decided to wait until the annual Town Meeting before making any further moves, according to board chair Marie Bartlett.

Madeleine Henley

Meanwhile, back in Bethel selectmen are looking for a new town manager, but they have a little more time for the search than was first thought.

Madeleine Henley announced in early December that she was moving on, and would resign her position here effective Jan. 3.

Henley, who was named Maine's Town Manager of the Year for 1996, had been chosen as the director of general services for Guilford County, North Carolina.

But on Friday, Dec. 13, Henley learned that her new job was no job -- the position had been cut, apparently as the result of political infighting in the county.

She then agreed to stay in Bethel a while longer, giving the selectmen more time to find a replacement.

Madigan, Thompson, et al.

Andover saw considerable municipal turnover in 1996, with several Water District trustees resigning in frustration over the course of the year, as the district attempted to find a way to bring itself into compliance with federal clean water drinking standards.

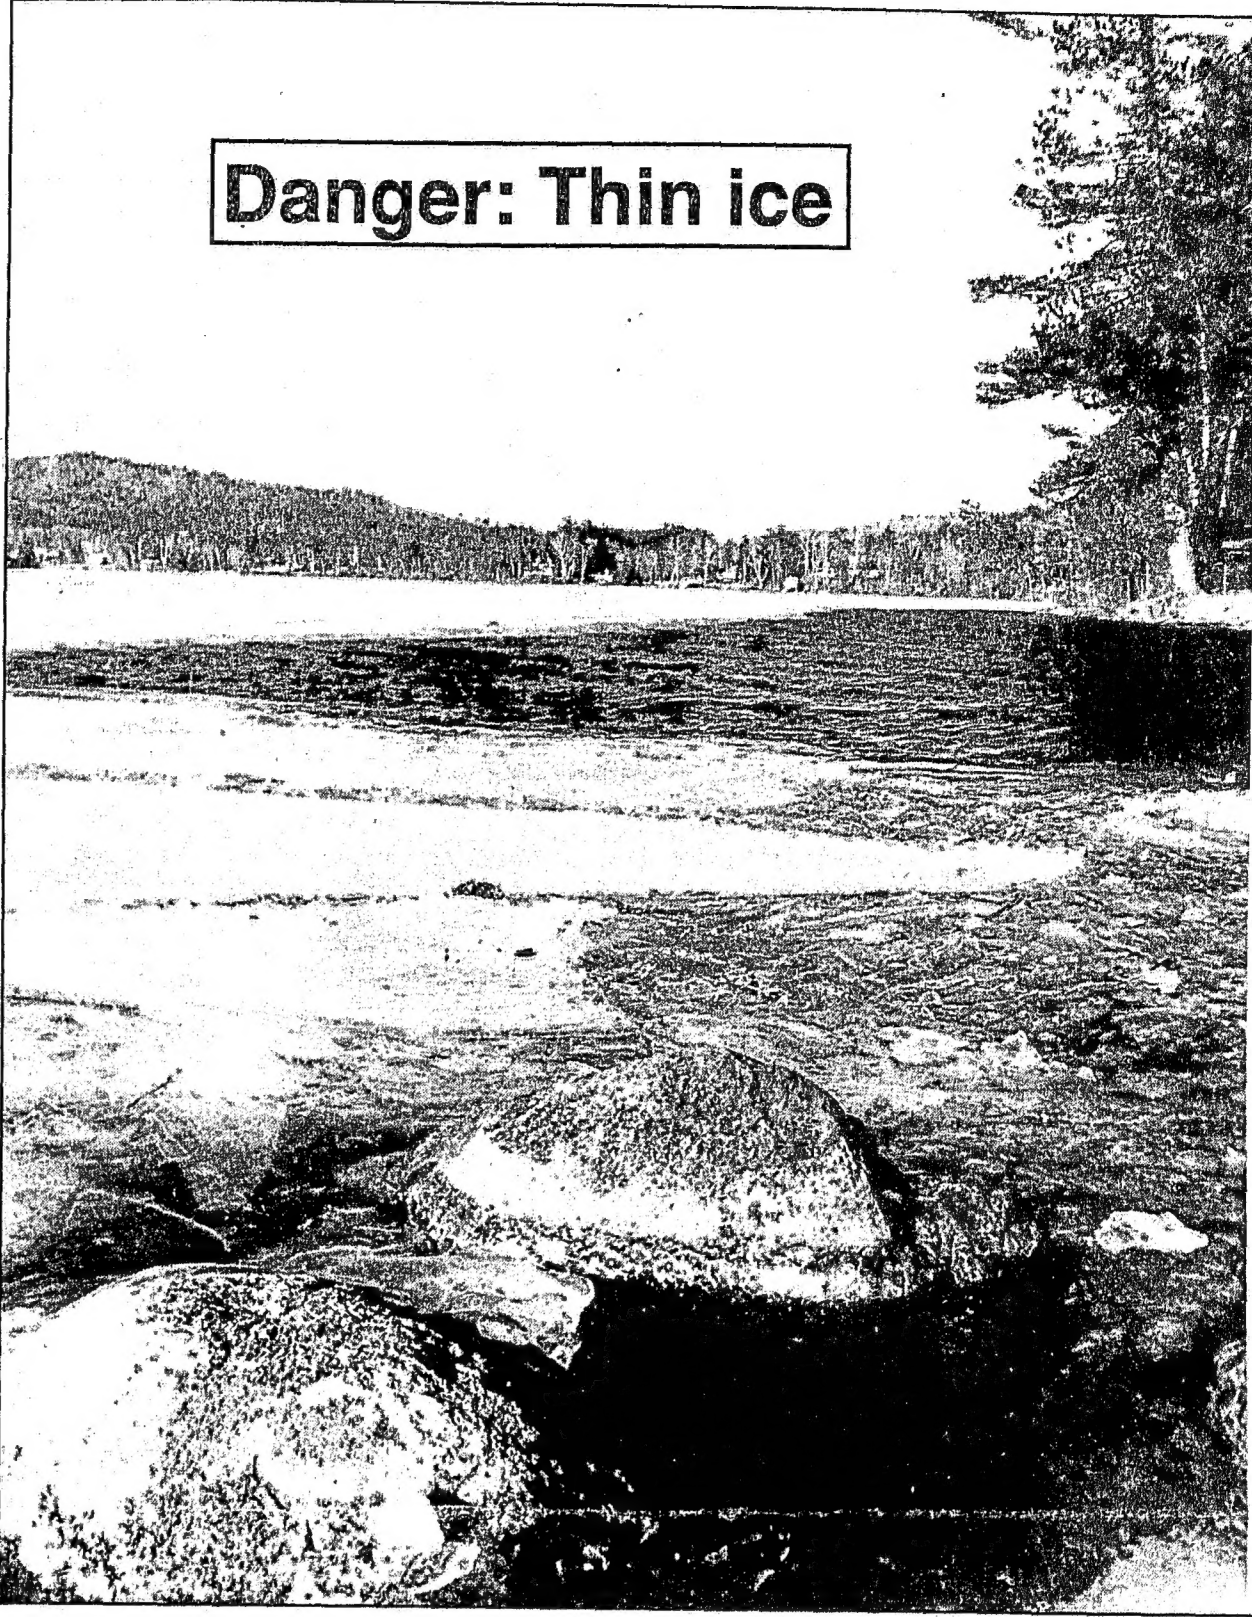

And selectman Joe Madigan was recalled by voters, after a stormy year-long tenure that saw meetings abruptly adjourned and criminal charges brought against one resident who questioned Madigan's handling of town affairs. (The charges were eventually dropped.)

In a letter to the editor published in The Citizen prior to the recall vote, Madigan quoted Winston Churchill and likened his own position to a roll in Greek tragedy, but when the vox populi was heard, he was gone.

In Upton, an attempt was also made to recall selectman Clayton Thompson, but the effort foundered on legalities and is currently in limbo.

Thompson's critics are now waiting to see the results of the annual Town Meeting votes, before deciding on whether to press ahead with their recall efforts.

Danger: Thin ice

UNSAFE AT ANY SPEED
The warm late-December weather has prompted Inland Fisheries and Wildlife officials to warn everyone, including ice fishermen and snowmobilers, to stay off lakes and ponds because of thin ice and open water. Here, water on Lake Christopher is roughed up by Monday's strong winds.

Economic growth here was slow but steady in 1996

Local economic growth continued at a steady, if unspectacular, pace in 1996.

Perhaps the most visible evidence of that growth is the new Norway Savings Bank building at the intersection of the Parkway and Route 2.

The building is the newest addition to Bethel Station. Its traditional design and brick facing have been well received in town, and have helped to ease fears about the design direction Bethel Station was taking.

But despite this attractive addition, progress elsewhere in Bethel Station remains slow.

There were two further disappointments during the year: the United States Postal Service backed off on plans to locate a new post office in Bethel Station (see related story) and plans for a McDonald's franchise fell through.

In June developer Heinie Merrill confirmed that he was negotiating with the fast food giant. He also prepared a site for a new building, across the parkway from the new bank building.

But by October the negotiations had fallen through. Merrill said it was because McDonald's was facing economic problems and had put a halt on all expansion in northern New England. A spokesman for McDonald's denied that, saying the company still had its eye on Bethel, but not Bethel Station.

In other private-sector activity, Bethel's high-tech start-up company, NetExpress, merged with New England Internet Services of Portland.

Local unemployment decreased over the past year, but some jobs here were lost when the Newton & Tebbets mill in West Bethel was

I'm against that beano hall.

Over the horizon

Also in the news this year, but not yet certainties, were other projects that could have an economic impact here.

The most dramatic is a high-stakes bingo hall in Albany.

In September, representatives of the Passamaquoddy Tribe announced they were resurrecting plans for a bingo hall on tribal land in the township.

Similar plans had been floated in the past, and invariably met with strong opposition from Albany residents.

That was once again the case this year. At a meeting in early October residents blasted the plan, citing concerns about crime, pollution, taxes and quality of life.

Maine Gov. Angus King also let it be known that he was opposed to the use of gambling as an economic development tool.

The tribe, however, appeared undeterred. Portland attorney Bill Plouffe, who is representing the Passamaquoddy on the project, said Monday he expects applications to be filed with the Land Use Regulation Commission before the end of January.

Current plans, he said, call for the bingo hall to operate from mid-March to mid-December, so as to complement, rather than compete with, local ski-related businesses.

Plans were also announced in 1996 for the expansion of the natural-gas pipeline that runs through Albany, Bethel and Gilead. A new spur through Bethel and Greenwood was also proposed.

If realized, the new or expanded pipeline would mean new tax revenues for both towns.

MERTON BROWN

conviction, Brown's alleged dishonesty regarding the affair, and a small number of administrative lapses in his job performance.

Despite Henley's accusations Brown had strong support in town, where more than 500 people signed a petition calling for him to retain his job.

Backed by the petition, Brown appealed his firing to the Board of Selectmen, but the board, by a vote of 3-2, backed the town manager's decision.

Brown and his family moved from town, but he was not able to leave his problems behind. In May he was indicted for embezzling $10,900 while serving as treasurer of the Maine Town and City Clerks Association.

THANKS FROM ROTARY

To the Editor:

As we end the calendar year, I wish to express, on behalf of the Bethel Rotary Club, my appreciation to all community members, businesses, and seasonal visitors who have been most generous and supportive of our many activities. Most recently the Bethel Rotary Club's Christmas for Children Campaign netted over $7,000, and helped over 100 families. Also, the Bethel Rotary Club's annual fruit sale, in October and November, generated funds that were an all-time high over the past nine years. The feeling of helping others was never more evident.

We also receive financial support from our annual spring and fall country breakfasts at Gould Academy, as well as the annual Bethel Rotary Club Tag Sale and Auction, as it continues to grow in items and sales.

These fundraising activities provide finances that go directly back into our communities: educational assistance awards for graduating high school seniors' post-secondary plans; annual Rotary Leadership Conference for high school sophomores; assisting area school counselors with their annual Career Awareness Day that serves over 300 freshmen; donations are given to area agencies and services such as Big Brothers and Big Sisters, Androscoggin Home Health Services, West Bethel Children's Center, Bethel Area Health Center, Bethel Library, and local Boys' and Girls' Scout units.

However, the Bethel Rotary Club's motto is Service Above Self. The club's priority is to provide community, district, and international service projects. The past two years our club has provided community service to Maine Conservation School's buildings, Crescent Park Elementary School's ball fields, restoration and annual setup of the Bethel Area Clergy's Live Nativity facilities, sponsoring "inbound" foreign exchange students to our area high school, and also Outward Bound high school and college students to other countries, pet visitations to area convalescent homes, provide annual Senior Citizen Christmas Dinner, and continuously serve as tutors, speakers, and volunteers at our local schools.

In looking to 1997, our club's "wish list": to assist the 1997 Molykott Day Committee with resources and networking, so this annual summer celebration can be close to the superb operation and production of our Bethel Bicentennial celebration -- to facilitate activities, resources in establishing an area community center, that could provide activities from pre-schoolers, to teens, to senior citizens (it has only been talk, but no action.) -- provide annual activities for students, families, and senior citizens.

Once again, a special thank you to all SAD44 community members, businesses, seasonal visitors, SAD44 schools, Gould Academy, and the Bethel Citizen for your ongoing support. Happy New Year!

Dan Hart
Rotary Club President

CHRISTMAS FOR KIDS THANKS

To the Editor:

I would like to take this opportunity to thank the many people, organizations, and businesses who helped make this year's Christmas for Children drive so successful. Thanks to these efforts, well over 100 children were able to enjoy new presents on Christmas morning.

This year's drive received approximately $8,000 worth of contributions. It is important to note that donations came from throughout New England and as far away as Florida. The two days that the Rotary Club spent in front of the Bethel Foodliner resulted in over $1,300 worth of contributions. The Bethel Rotary Club is proud to be associated with this worthwhile activity and prouder still to receive the wonderful support from the community.

Special thanks are also in order to the Bethel Citizen for their continued publicity with regard to the Christmas for Children campaign. Each season the Citizen has provided a space for the Rotary Club to keep the community up to date on the level of contributions received.

On behalf of the entire Bethel Rotary Club, please accept my best wishes for a happy and prosperous New Year.

INFO ON CASTLES SOUGHT

To the Editor:

I know it is the week before Christmas and an absolutely terrible time for me to request things, but I'm hoping over Christmas break some folks might be willing to do some searching.

The seventh-graders will be studying European castles during January. I'm in need of two things to help them through this project.

1. Pictures, brochures, travel guides, or books on countries that contain castle articles that the students could use as a resource. If anyone has pictures, knows the name and/or location of the castle, that would be a start. A person who has traveled there and would like to come in and talk would also be useful. A connection to a travel agency that may have these brochures or another source would also help.

2. I'd like to bring in some guest speakers who are in the field of advertising. Also individuals who wire the ads to promote tourism or ads to sell/rent real estate are other possibilities.

I'll be happy to answer questions and of course will return all borrowed materials. I hope to hear from many people.

To the Editor:

Bethel thwarts plan to move post office

'We are charged to run like a business.' (To pay more than necessary for the new post office in Bethel), 'would be unjust to the rest of the American public.'

TERRY BROOKS
real estate specialist

Bethel residents did in 1996 what few towns elsewhere have been able to do: convince the United States Postal Service that the wishes of post office customers, not the dictates of the postal service bureaucracy, should determine where a new post office is to be located.

The postal service wanted to replace the current post office with a new facility in Bethel Station. Townsfolk -- at least a vocal segment of townsfolk -- wanted it to stay where it is.

When the smoke had cleared, the post office stayed put. Not in the present building, but in a new building on the old site.

The postal service claims space in the present building is too limited and employees are forced to work under unsafe conditions.

In February the postal service put out a request for proposals for an enlarged building.

Of the four proposals received by the April deadline, three were rejected as unsuitable or too expensive.

The fourth site, the site the U.S.P.S. favored, was in Bethel Station, near the railroad tracks across from the end of Mechanic Street.

No proposal was submitted at that time for remodeling or rebuilding on the present site, and the postal service, at least initially, ruled out that site as too small to accommodate the post office's perceived needs.

But the Bethel selectmen balked at the prospect of the post office being moved from the village proper.

And they cited a November 1995 petition, in which 600 people expressed satisfaction with the present site and opposition to any relocation outside the "Traditional Village of Bethel."

The selectmen argued that if more time was given an acceptable proposal could be developed for the present site.

In July the postal service agreed to put off a decision long enough to allow a potential developer to purchase the building and come up with a proposal.

In August Carl Glidden, owner of the adjacent grocery store, purchased the building at a foreclosure auction.

And at a meeting later that month, residents jammed the Crescent Park School cafeteria and almost unanimously opposed any plan to relocate the post office.

Shortly after that meeting U.S.P.S. real estate specialist Terry Brooks contacted Bob Chadbourne, chairman of the Board of Selectmen, and told him the post office would not be going to Bethel Station.

Bethel Station developer Heinie Merrill said his office had been told by Brooks that public pressure had made it impossible for the postal service to work with Bethel Station.

Brooks said Tuesday that the postal service had been working with Glidden and has come up with a workable plan.

"It appears it's going to be a fit," Brooks said. "His plans are something I'm quite happy with."

Brooks said he hoped to have the paperwork resolved in time for construction to begin by the time the snow melts.

Later, in a move many saw as related, the postal service announced that it had changed its mind about expanding the present Newry Post Office, which is located on the Bear River side of town.

Instead the postal service was seeking a location for an expanded Newry facility on the Sunday River side of town.

Such a facility would presumably be able to handle the large volume of mail generated by Sunday River Ski Resort -- thus easing the strain on the Bethel Post Office.

Rabies here now; moose hunters next fall

State officials now consider the rabies outbreak reaching this area to be of epidemic proportions.

River above the Lewiston-Auburn area.

Moose zone approved

Also in December, the Department of Inland Fisheries and Wildlife approved expanding Maine's moose hunt to the Bethel area in the fall.

The arrival of rabies late in the year left some residents worrying about the safety of their families and their pets.

And the promised arrival of moose hunters next fall has some business people worried about the tourist business.

Reports of rabid wild animals in the Norway-Paris area early in the year proved to be a warning of things to come here.

In late October, a fox suspected of having rabies attacked a puppy on its owner's doorstep on the Perkins Valley Rd. in Woodstock. Too young to have a rabies shot, the puppy was put to sleep.

In early December, a rabid fox on the East Bethel Rd. bit a dog. That incident was followed a week later by a rabid raccoon biting a dog in Greenwood.

The last 1996 area incident occurred when a rabid raccoon bit a cat in Newry. It was reportedly the first case north of the Androscoggin

Last-minute opposition by some Bethel businesses failed to change the minds of a majority of IFW Advisory Council members.

The business people worried that the combination of moose hunters and tourists coming to see live moose would be bad news for businesses catering to tourists.

Other people favored the hunt, arguing the growing moose population could support it, and that thinning the numbers slightly might lower the incidence of car/moose accidents.

Another large wild animal -- the mountain lion -- may have made an appearance near Grafton Notch State Park in July. A New York family visiting the area reportedly saw the animal cross the road.

A wildlife biologist who later examined the animal's tracks could not confirm they belonged to a mountain lion, but said they were consistent with a large cat.

Maine Tax Man Cometh

By MIKE BROWN

Budgets, whether state or household, can be reduced to a rather simple explanation -- projected revenue must match projected spending.

But when it comes to most state budgets, which must be balanced by law by the governor and his administration, all sorts of strange, unexplained, budgetary voodooism occurs. Firstly, because a governor is the state's most political animal saddled by an income/outgo cinch strap law, the chief executive has to be a most creative accountant.

Secondly, unlike family household budgeters, the state bureaucracy of some 12,000 gimmers stick their million-dollar fingers into the budget equation. And so it's not surprising that few households (which pay for the state budget) understand the biennial bag. Neither do most legislators which households send to Augusta to keep an eye on their increasing taxes.

Gov. Angus King recently announced "his" 1998-1999 Maine State Budget. It increases to $3,776 billion over the last biennium of $3,594 billion. It certainly appears that no matter who is governor at the beginning of a new millennium that Maine state government is going to cost over $2 billion a year or about $3,300 annually for each and every one of Maine's 1.25 million citizens.

And that, brother, is a load.

King's budget will never pass as presented. No biennial state budget ever goes or is expected to. There are 186 lawmakers, a hoard of fringe special-interest groups including some 283 (and counting) registered lobbyists privately compensated at about $3.5 million annually attempting to influence legislation which, of course, influences the final budget.

Obviously, as the original budget gets amended mainly by political influence through legislation, the budget numbers are cooked into pork hash which must be distributed to feed the hungry bureaucracy. This, in gummint speak, is called a balanced budget.

Just two of King's budget bangaroos will probably rise to acrimonious floor debate which could get downright nasty. It should be noted that although the Democrats are in majority of both House and Senate, and King is really a Democrat in politically transient independent duds, the passing of a budget requires a two-thirds vote and will require acquiescence (with protest) by Republicans.

Last session the R's worked hard and long and with some help from Democrats (the House was partisan paired) to pass an income tax cap. Essentially, this was a stopper on the percentage tax rate of increase for wage earners. The R's said it would help a majority of low- and middle-income workers with their household budgets. The D's said it would help the more wealthy. There's some merit in both arguments.

But the tax cap (which would not go into effect until this biennium budget) certainly was a warning shot across bureaucracy's bow to cut its spending. King's budget, instead, kills the cap and savings for wage earners to balance his budget. The governor's speculation is that the tax cap would merely transfer tax increases to the generic whipping boy -- local property taxes.

King also nails a couple other Republican initiatives of last year deleting in his new budget $18 million for special funding for hospitals disadvantaged by "tax and match" and another $50 million eliminating DSH payments to local hospitals.

The Democrats, on the other political hand, may not be too enthused with King's fiscal balancer of closing all state retail liquor stores. It should be understood that Maine government is not "getting out of the liquor business" as many believe. If all state stores were closed, Maine still would be in the wholesale liquor business (with revenue of some $20 million annually) and private sellers would still have to purchase their inventory through the state system.

King says that laying off 110 liquor store employees and closing the stores would save $8.5 million. No subject or department was more thoroughly researched over the past four years than Maine's liquor privatization plans. It was rife with problems and what amount of "savings" as one of them. Even many Republicans opposed privatization when the facts and figures were debated in committee.

It will be interesting to see how the majority Democrats handle the proposal. The D's are more friendly with labor unions. (From another corner comes the Christian Civic League assuming that privatization would increase liquor consumption.) And Senate President Mark Lawrence of Kittery may have a political dilemma if he agrees to closing Maine's only discount liquor store in his hometown.

The bottom line is that the tax collector takes so much of your earnings to balance the budget that you just can't budget the balance. (Veteran newsman and columnist Mike Brown writes regularly on the Augusta political scene. His views are his own and do not necessarily reflect those of The Citizen.)

Stay off the ice

AUGUSTA--The recent unseasonably warm weather has ice fishing enthusiasts wondering whether the ice will be thick enough to hold them when the season opens on New Year's Day. Four inches of ice are needed for safe fishing. Paul Reynolds, spokesman for the Maine Department of Inland Fisheries and Wildlife, recommends that people simply stay off the ice everywhere in the state. He said most of the ponds in Western Maine are open in places, if not entirely open.

AWD schedules meetings

ANDOVER--An Andover Water District public informational meeting has been scheduled for Thursday, Jan. 9, according to trustee Ann Glazier. Its purpose is to discuss the new well project. Glazier said trustees are currently looking into the Meade property for possible placement of a reservoir, and the Ricker property for possible placement of a well. Selectmen Tuesday appointed Dave Greig to finish the term of trustee Laurie Vogt-Barter, who recently resigned. Glazier also said that engineer Al Hodson has been rehired by trustees to work on the project. Two attorneys, Alan Stone of Lewiston and Mike Stevens of Andover, have also been hired. Stone will deal with federal and state agencies, while Stevens will handle landowner negotiations. The informational meeting will be held at the Town Hall, and starts at 7:30 p.m. This week's regular trustee meeting will take place Friday, Jan. 3, at 7 p.m. at the Andover Elementary School. The town hydrants will be discussed at that meeting.

N.H. hotel gambling bill introduced

GORHAM, N.H.--State Rep. Lawrence Guay of Gorham has introduced an electronic gambling machine bill into the New Hampshire House. The bill is intended to help preserve the state's grand old hotels, according to the Coos County Democrat. The bill would legalize the machines at hotels such as the Mount Washington and the Balsams. Guay said he was prompted to introduce the bill as a result of another bill currently being drafted that would legalize gaming machines at race tracks in southern New Hampshire. "If they have it there and we don't," he said, "this area would be on the losing end." His bill will define the term "grand old hotel" and work out the details of introducing the machines.

Whooping cough reported

PORTLAND--Thirteen cases of pertussis (whooping cough) have been reported in southern Maine, according to the Portland Press Herald. The highly contagious disease, which can be deadly in small children if left untreated, has appeared in elementary and high schools in York, Cumberland and Oxford counties.

ALA offers ski card

AUGUSTA--Cross-country skiers can support the American Lung Association of Maine by purchasing a cross-country Ski Privilege Card. The card features 15 cross-country centers, with half-price skiing for card holders and up to four family members or friends each day. Proceeds from the card help support ALA-Maine programs, including their campaign to reduce youth smoking in Maine.

British invade New England

BRETTON WOODS, N.H.--Many skiers from the United Kingdom are coming to New England this winter instead of to the Alps, according to the Boston Globe. The skiers number approximately 15,000, and they're heading for the New England slopes because the ski package is cheaper, friendlier and offers more snow-making capability, according to tour organizers. In 1984, five British skiers made up the first organized trip across the Atlantic. They spent a week at Killington. This year, Killington and the other American Skiing Co. areas will host some 12,000 British skiers. The cost for a week in New Hampshire was estimated at $1,095, including air fare, other transportation, lodging, tickets, breakfast and dinner. A package in France, Switzerland or Italy would cost $1,200, $1,000 and $830, respectively, and be far inferior, according to one skier interviewed.

Down East publisher investigated

ROCKPORT--Allen Fernald, publisher of Down East magazine, is a victim in an investment case under state investigation, according to his lawyer. Fernald and Dr. Gordon Paine have been ordered by Maine Superior Court Justice Donald Alexander to respond to a subpoena regarding the investigation, according to the Knox County Courier-Gazette. The investment fraud investigation is the largest in Maine history, the state said. No one has been charged, but the state is looking into whether securities were being sold illegally and investors not informed of the risks involved. Fernald's attorney, Stephen Hanscom, said that money invested by Fernald was his own and not connected with the magazine.

MMA, technical colleges to collaborate

BANGOR--Leaders of the Maine Technical College System and Maine Maritime Academy signed a formal agreement last week to explore collaborative, cost-efficient ways to enhance educational opportunities for students. The officials also signed two articulation agreements to facilitate the transfer process for graduates of Washington County Technical College's Associate of Applied Science program in Marine Technology and Eastern Maine Technical College's Associate Degree program in Business Management to enroll with junior status at MMA for a B.S. in Marina Management.

DEP issues lamp policy

AUGUSTA--The Department of Environmental Protection has issued a policy to promote safe recycling of fluorescent lights, which contain mercury. The guidance establishes safeguards and helps businesses and institutions avoid some of the high costs of handling hazardous wastes. When a lamp is broken or disposed of in an incinerator or landfill, the mercury can contaminate air, soil, surface water and ground water. State and federal regulations govern the disposal of the lights. For most organizations (excluding households), disposing of mercury-containing lamps would involve hazardous waste testing and determinations. But under the new policy such determinations are not necessary if the lamps are kept intact and properly recycled. Copies of the policy can be obtained by calling 207-822-6300 or 207-287-2651.

Woman burned pumping gas dies

ROCHESTER, N.Y.--A 19-year-old woman whose clothes caught fire moments after she pumped gasoline into her car Sunday has died from burns. Mary Sandman pumped the gas, then drove a few yards away and parked. She apparently then lit a match that ignited a ball of flame inside the car. She ran from the car, and the flames were extinguished by bystanders. Some gasoline apparently fell on her clothes, according to investigators. The car's gas tank appeared to be working properly. Sandman was burned over 90 percent of her body.

Eisenhower note displayed

WASHINGTON--In a capital where apologies are framed to sidestep blame, the National Archives has put on display one man's historic, unambiguous acceptance of responsibility. It is a slip of paper on which Dwight Eisenhower scribbled a statement to be issued if the D-Day invasion of the European mainland in World War II turned out to be a failure. The statement was carried folded in his wallet, and is one of a smattering of the 4 billion government records held by the National Archives and recently put on exhibit. Eisenhower's note -- written on June 5, 1944 -- read, "My decision to attack at this time was based upon the best information available. The troops, the air and navy did all their bravery and devotion to duty could do. If any blame or fault attaches to the attempt, it is mine alone."

From the Bethel Police log:

Driving violations keep police busy

On Wednesday, Dec. 25 at 8:03 p.m. a vehicle was reported to be operating erratically while westbound on Route 2. The subject was stopped in the Route 2 rest area. He showed no signs of intoxication. The subject said he had been traveling all day and was fatigued, and had pulled into the rest area to take a nap. No further action was taken.

At 8:34 p.m. a Bethel Mainway/Irving employee reported a juvenile was observed taking store items and putting them in his pocket. He was released to a Bethel resident, with whom he was staying. A report was to be completed for the juvenile intake officer.

Friday, Dec. 27

At 7:27 a.m. police stopped a subject on the Sunday River Road for speeding (62/45). A license check showed he was currently under suspension. Gerald S. Nowlin Jr., 28, was arrested for operating after suspension and was transported to the Oxford County Jail for processing.

At 10:28 a.m. a Bethel resident advised she had been in an argument with her boyfriend, and requested that he be removed from her residence and advised not to return. Police went to the residence and spoke with the subject, who said he was leaving and would not be back. He was advised if he returned he would be arrested for criminal trespass. He stated he understood.

At 7:20 p.m. a subject was stopped on Route 26 for a defective headlight. A license check showed his right to operate in Maine was under suspension for failure to appear. The subject was also wanted for failure to appear in Bangor District Court. Kevin M. Crosby, 24, of Marblehead, Mass., received a summons for operating after suspension and was arrested on a warrant for failure to appear.

At 9:35 p.m. a subject was stopped for speeding (72/50) on Route 26. A subsequent license check showed his right to operate in Maine was under suspension. Peter D. Bogdonoff, 40, of Hampton Falls, N.H., received a summons for speeding and was arrested for operating after suspension.

Saturday, Dec. 28

At 11:50 p.m. a driver was stopped on Mechanic Street with two subjects riding on the back bumper of the vehicle. Sean M. Kangas, 19, of Bethel was charged with driving to endanger.

Sunday, Dec. 29

At 11:58 p.m. a subject was stopped on Route 26 for defective tail lights. A search of the vehicle produced a small amount of drug paraphernalia and a small amount of marijuana. Blake A. Dubin, 19, of Saco was issued a summons for possession of a usable amount of marijuana.

This report highlights points of interest from the Bethel Police Department log, but does not include all reports of police activity. To reach the Bethel Police Department, call 911 in emergency situations, 824-3437 in non-emergencies. An answering machine takes calls when an officer is not in the office.

FROM THE

Bethel Area Chamber of Commerce

Skiing members of the Bethel Area Chamber are encouraged to take advantage of the discounting programs that both Mt. Abram and Sunday River offer.

Chamber season passes at Mt. Abram are available for $150 (good Sunday through Friday, day skiing only) or $200 with night skiing included. These passes are transferable to employees or family members and are purchased directly from Mt. Abram.

Mid-week non-holiday passes to Sunday River are available for $380. A chamber business can purchase up to five of these passes.

Both ski mountains make available their "corporate ticket program" to chamber members, too. Day lift tickets, either mid-week or weekend, can be purchased for discounted prices, only to chamber members. Call the chamber office at 824-2282, for more information on any of the above offerings.

Mt. Abram is actively soliciting interested individuals or groups of skiers to join their Thursday evening race series. Please call Leslie at Mt. Abram, 875-5003, for more information on this.

The Sunday River Inn has produced a "no-nonsense, no advertising" Bethel area map in a tear-off pad format. They would like to sell them at their cost, $2 a pad, to interested members. Call them at 824-2410 if you would like some.

We would like to get the word out about the Sunday River-Bethel Trolley Service, which is a free transportation option between Sunday River and the Bethel Inn (with several stops in between). The service starts at 12:15 p.m. each day and makes hourly loops with stops at South Ridge, Snow Cap Lodge, White Cap Lodge, Summit Hotel, Sunday River Brewing Co., Casablanca Cinema, Bethel Foodliner and the Bethel Inn and ends at 10:15 p.m. Sundays through Thursdays and 12:55 a.m. Fridays, Saturdays and holidays.

Many thanks to Doug Zinchuk who is keeping watch over the community Christmas tree lights. The rainy and wet weather has played havoc on the electrical connections, so the lights tend to keep going out. Doug is doing a great job making sure the tree looks beautiful fully lit each evening.

The chamber staff has been keeping the office open seven days a week for its members' and visitors' convenience. They have extended office hours on Mondays and Thursdays from 8 a.m. to 8 p.m. and Saturdays and Sundays from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Other days you may find the office open from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. On behalf of all of us, we wish all of you a very happy, healthy and prosperous 1997.

Bryant Pond residents spring to environmental action

Environmental problems often seem too large for individual efforts to really make a difference, but in 1996 some Bryant Pond residents showed that sometimes acting locally can make all the difference.

In January, the Maine Department of Transportation decided to close a Route 26 roadside spring. MDOT said testing of the spring -- a source of drinking water for over 50 years -- revealed an unacceptable bacteria count.

MDOT was concerned the spring, which is located in its right of way, could be a liability risk for the state.

But spring users, dismayed at the loss of their water, gathered 600 signatures on a petition opposing the closing. A cooperative effort among area residents, MDOT and Jim Chandler of the Oxford County Soil and Water Conservation District finally produced a solution.

The outlet pipe was redesigned to prevent contamination from outside material, and a regular testing schedule was set up. The spring reopened in July.

In March, quick action by the Woodstock road crew and fire department prevented oil from an overturned tanker truck from reaching Lake Christopher.

The Bryant Pond spring is safe to drink again.

The truck went off the side of Route 26 on Merrifield Hill, spilling 6,000 gallons of number six oil into a roadside stream.

But the local crews were able to quickly fashion a makeshift dam of sand and plywood, preventing the oil from reaching the lake. State and private company crews handled the long-term cleanup.

A week after the accident, at the annual Woodstock town meeting, the town crew and fire department were honored for their efforts by the Community Lakes Association.

Rivers, trees and towers

In June, it was good news for the Bethel stretch of the Androscoggin River, as the Department of Environmental Protection decided it could be classified as swimmable. The stretch was one of two (the other in Lewiston-Auburn) that had previously been considered not swimmable.

Water testing by the Bethel Pollution Prevention Team played a major role in the river's upgrading.

The hotly-debated clearcutting referendum -- with three options to choose from -- drew a different split in votes locally than statewide in the November election.

Among choices 2A (ban clearcutting), 2B (compact for Maine forests) and 2C (no change in forest practices), the statewide breakdown was 29, 48 and 23 percent of the vote, respectively.

Locally, however, percentages were 19 for 2A, 41 for 2B and 40 for 2C.

Item 2B will have to be revoked next November, leaving loggers and others in the area wood industry in a state of uncertainty.

There is still a possibility that in the meantime the state legislature will come up with an alternative law that might garner more broad-based support.

Plans to fix the Speck Mountain lookout tower fell through for various reasons, including mechanical problems with a helicopter and poor weather. Organizers are still in hopes the tower can be rebuilt.

Hollywood goes Gilead, while Bethel sees stars

As 1996 came to a close the Bethel area was waiting for its debut on the big screen.

"The Myth of Fingerprints" -- directed by Bart Freundlich and starring Roy Scheider, Noah Wyle and Blythe Danner -- was filmed in the area in early spring, largely at the Chandler Estate in Andover.

Bethel Village, Newry and Bryant Pond also played roles as filming sites in the independent movie, scheduled for release in 1997.

Many area residents appeared as extras in the film, which focused on relationships at a Thanksgiving family gathering.

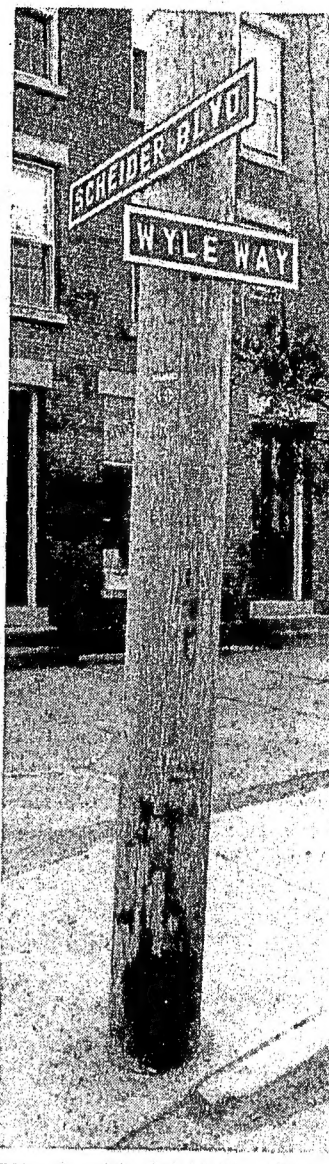

Area lodging, food and support service businesses also benefited from the movie crew's presence.

In December, the film was chosen to appear in January's Sundance Film Festival in Park City, Utah. "Myth" was one of 17 films selected from 500 applicants.

In September the film "Spitfire Grill" -- filmed in Vermont but set in Gilead, Maine -- hit the theaters. It starred Ellen Burstyn and was centered around a young woman trying to turn her life around after serving time in prison.

The film contained numerous references to western Maine locations, including (besides Gilead) Bethel and Lewiston.

Locally-produced video -- in the form of local access television -- was threatened when the Bethel Budget Committee and selectmen voted to cut funding for Channel IV. Voters at the annual Town Meeting, however, voted overwhelmingly to put it back.

Ski scene here goes big time, nighttime

American Skiing Company

Local ski news in 1996 was big and bright.

Big in Newry, now home to the continent's largest skiing company. Bright in Locke Mills, which now offers night skiing under the lights.

The big news came in February, when Les Otten announced plans for a merger with S-K-I Limited.

At the time of the announcement, Otten, through his holding company

LBO Enterprises, already owned Sunday River, Attitash-Bear Peak and Cranmore in New Hampshire and Sugarbush in Vermont.

The merger with S-K-I added Mount Snow, Haystack and the giant Killington in Vermont; Waterville Valley in New Hampshire and Sugarloaf here in Maine.

Citing anti-trust concerns, federal regulators forced Otten to spin off Cranmore and Waterville Valley, but he later purchased Pico in Vermont.

In announcing the merger with S-K-I, Otten said it would allow for economies of scale in purchasing and managing the various resorts, and would make possible far more coordinated marketing efforts.

The growth does not appear ready to stop. "It's going to be an interesting 24 months in the ski industry," said ASC spokesman Skip King recently. The industry's movement toward consolidation is "not done yet."

King said no new ASC deals are currently in the works, but "there are possibilities in the U.S. and some in Canada."

With the industry consolidating at its current pace, the title of "largest company" will no doubt be passed around.

But back here in western Maine, ASC has already created nearly two dozen new jobs, King said, mostly well paid professional and technical positions.

Night skiing

On a more local scale, there was a very visible development in Locke Mills -- where Ski Mt. Abram began last week to offer night skiing.

The night skiing was made possible by an array of 80 lights, which illuminate 10 of the ski area's 35 trails.

The new lights carve in a graceful S-curve down the face of Mt. Abram, adding a lovely touch to the night sky over Locke Mills.

Hopes are high locally that the new lights will give the small ski area a much-needed boost.

Once again, our area saw little major crime in '96

The fatal shooting of an Andover man by San Diego police topped the crime news in 1996.

Lewis Danny Newcomb, 44, left Andover late in December of 1995. With him were Angela Smith, 16, and Phalan Haney, 14, also of Andover.

An arrest warrant charging Newcomb with criminal restraint was issued shortly thereafter.

The trio wound up in a motel in San Diego, Calif. in early January. Police tracked them to the motel, but Newcomb, who had a gun, refused to give himself up. He was shot and killed by police in the girls' presence.

'I think he made a decision that he wasn't going to go alive.'

CAPT. TOM HALL
San Diego Police Dept.,
on Danny Newcomb

The girls returned to Andover following the shooting. In September, however, Haney ran away a second time. She was eventually located staying with people she befriended in Northridge, Mass.

In February Charles Gill, who had posed as a psychologist at the Bethel Area Health Center, was sentenced on state and federal charges.

Gill pled guilty to a state felony charge of theft by deception, and had 16 misdemeanor charges of unlawful practice of psychology dismissed. He was sentenced to three years in prison, with all but 18 months suspended.

The sentence was to be served concurrently with a three-year, four-month federal sentence related to a guilty plea to mail and wire fraud charges, and making false claims to Medicare and Medicaid.

Other crimes in the Bethel area included an attempted strong-armed robbery of an elderly Bethel woman on Mill Hill; an alleged burglary and assault on two Woodstock men by three Buckfield residents; and a rash of vandalism, harassment, fighting and other disorderly behavior, mostly by juveniles, in Bethel Village.

SAD44 budget now goes to referendum vote

1996 brought the first school-budget referendum vote to SAD44.

Nearly 500 voters -- fewer than referendum supporters hoped for, but more than the usual turnout at previous district budget meetings -- approved a $7 million general fund budget. The overall district tax assessment remained the same.

The year also brought the departure of Supt. Ron Jenkins, who had held the position for three years.

Jenkins' job evaluation was the subject of controversy through the spring and summer. Although the evaluation itself was never discussed publicly, there were allegations by some School Board members that other directors wanted to hold a "no confidence" vote regarding the superintendent.

Jenkins left Oct. 1, to take a job as superintendent of Indian education in Maine. Dr. Kent Webster was hired as interim superintendent for the remainder of the school year.

At year's end a Superintendent

Search Committee continued work to hire a permanent replacement.

1996 also saw the departure of longtime school directors Merton Brown of Bethel and Margaret Hand of Woodstock, who both moved out of the district. Both had served as board chairman for part of their tenure.

SAD44 towns joined other vocational Region 9 members in defeating a proposed NOVA addition to Mountain Valley High School in Rumford.

At year's end the NOVA board was considering leasing the former Stephens High School in Rumford to house the vocational programs.

The three-year-old gymnasium floor at Crescent Park Elementary School received a soaking in October when an errant ball caused the fire sprinkler system to go off.

Damage to the floor was not as extensive as first feared, and it was decided to simply sand the slightly warped floor boards.

Local sports teams turn in strong seasons

Bethel area teams had seasons to be proud of in 1996, with some squads bringing home championships and others falling just short.

The Gould Academy girls' alpine ski team won the New England Prep School Division I championship in February, while the boys' team won the Maine Independent School championship.

A French skier who trained with the Gould Academy team won the State of Maine Cup slalom race at Mt. Abram in January.

Isabelle Fabre, a rookie on the Women's Pro Ski Tour, fine-tuned her slalom technique with help from Gould coach Tim LaVallee in the days leading up to the race.

Auburn's Julie Parisien won the giant slalom race.

In basketball, the Gould boys' team advanced to the semifinals of the Western Maine Class D State Tournament before losing to Richmond.

The Telstar High School boys' basketball team went to the Western Maine Class C Tournament for only the second time in school history. The Rebels played tough, but were beaten by Traip Academy in a preliminary round game.

In the spring, the Rebel baseball team also went to the playoffs, beating Traip but then losing to Hall-Dale High School in the Western Class C semifinal game.

Fall brought the Telstar field hockey team within two goals of the Class C state championship. The Rebel girls won the Western Class C crown, beating Yarmouth High School, but lost to Hall-Dale in the state championship game.

The Gould Academy field hockey team won the MAISAD championship, then advanced to the final game of the New England Class C Prep School Championships before being defeated by Berkshire School.

The Telstar soccer team advanced to the Western Class C semifinal game, but lost to Falmouth.

Arlene Farr's, Stanley and Maxine Cram's Christmas guests were Terry, Georgia and Alicia Cram; Adam Cram and Karen; Amy Cram; Troy Fox; Ruth Hazelton; and Melissa Vining.

Todd and Tara and Todd II from New Jersey were at Walter and Kim Inman's overnight on Christmas. They, along with Walt, Kim, Vernie and Waltie, and Vernon and Miriam all had Christmas with Ginny and Bill Aridas.

The Christmas family supper was held on Sunday evening at Goodwill Hall of the Universalist Church. After the supper, carols were sung in the Sanctuary with Jim Burke at the organ. Marta Clements and Walter Inman, Jr., sang "Oh Christmas Tree" in French. Santa appeared much to the delight of the children young and old. Last Sunday, Virginia Aridas, Vernon and I attended the church service in North Conway. Our grandson, Brant Sanborn, played the bells in a group.

On Saturday evening at 6:30, there will be a semi-public installation of new officers for Granite Lodge AF & AM. Refreshments will be served.

On Monday at 6:30 p.m. there will be the installation supper at Granite Lodge AF & AM followed by the meeting.

Thursday evening the board meeting of the Universalist Church will meet with Bob Clifford at his home.

Well, Christmas is over, and now we look forward to the New Year. "The chief charm of Christmas is its simplicity. It is a festival that appeals to everyone, because everyone can understand it. A genuine fellowship whose source is our common share in the gift of the world's greatest Life which was given to the whole world."

I was invited to share Christmas at Ras and Karlene's home, with their granddaughter Michelle and her husband Paul and little nine-month-old Nikalaus Casey. Brent Bachelder, their son, and friend Peter Haraty from Providence, R.I., who cooked and served the dinner. Polly Mahoney and Kevin Slater of the Mahosuc Mountain Adventures were there, also. And we must not forget Muffin and Princess, the dogs. It was a time of sharing gifts, good food, and lively conversation. Happy New Year!

We are happy to see all the help that is being given to fire victims Walter and Joanne Appleby and family. They are amazed at all the work and supplies that have been donated. We hope they get settled soon and wish them much luck in the future.

Pete and Laurene stopped by for a short visit one evening recently.

The Wing household was busy this Christmas Eve. There were 15 persons who celebrated here by opening presents and having supper. We all had a wonderful time.

Nick and Marta Clements had all their children and grandchildren home for the holidays. Their son Bruce and his wife Cindy, and granddaughter Sarah came from Weare, N.H. Also, son David and his wife Audrey, and granddaughter Carolyn came from Birmingham, Ala. Another son, Eric, also spent the day with the family.

Larry Billings, curator, Woodstock Historical Society reports that the December meeting featured a potluck supper and a Christmas party. President Helvi Cary and Leon Conant provided the tree. Mary Billings helped organize the supper and provided place mats. Ruth Cox gave a research report of Christmas readings. The Hathaway family gave a book on the old telephone company. Secretary Kathleen Bean reported on the tribute to Ruby Emery. Thanks to Mary Cobb for a large photo of Ruby.

Ivan Morey will speak on his trip to Alaska at the January meeting of the Historical Society.

Tommy Poland and family held a Christmas get-together at Tammy and Vernon Davis' home in Bethel on the Sunday before Christmas. There were over 32 who attended the celebration.

I visited a short time with Janet Benson and Pam in the crowded grocery store on Tuesday. It was good to see them and wish them a Merry Christmas.

Have a Happy New Year everyone!

With U.S. Savings Bonds, the more you give, the more you receive.

Every day, we pass a little of ourselves on to the next generation. When it's best to go fishing, which bait to use, how to cast, what makes a keeper. The knowledge that we give stays with them forever. And we hope we've made their lives a little richer for the learning.

Giving U.S. Savings Bonds also passes an important lesson on to the future generation. Bonds can teach our children how to save, how interest grows and how a small investment can help make their dreams come true.

Buying U.S. Savings Bonds contributes to a solid and secure America for generations to come. What a great way for you to say, "I believe in your future!"

Bonds are as easy to buy as they are to give. Buy them at half their face value through your local bank. U.S. Savings Bonds are like friendships — the longer they're kept, the more they're worth.

So share the tradition of U.S. Savings Bonds. They're the gift that gives back more than you've given.

New skiers, coach promise bright ski season

By ALISON ALOISIO

Experience for the girls and new faces for the boys add up to two very competitive cross-country ski teams, in the eyes of Telstar High School coach Bob Remington.

And in alpine, a coach who helped the Rebels to a 1978 New England Championship has returned, hoping to guide her skiers to a winning season.

Cross-country

Last year cross-country skier Liza Fyberg finished in the top 10 in both the 5-kilometer classical and freestyle state competition. She took second place in the classical, with a team that finished in the middle of the pack.

Remington is looking for another strong year from Fyberg. And the Rebels have lost no one to graduation, giving them an experienced core of skiers.

Fyberg is joined by fellow seniors Jessie Wight and Monica Rolfe, and junior Michelle McInnis. Rolfe is new to the team this year, as are freshmen Jenn Fyberg and Erica Gundersen.

McInnis and Wight finished in the top 20 in classical and 25 in freestyle, respectively, in last year's state competition.

"Monica could be the fourth girl to make the team better," said Remington. "She's potentially as good as the other three (returning skiers)."

For the boys' team, "throw in Colin and Forrest, and the boys become very competitive, too," said Remington, referring to freshmen additions Colin Reuter and Forrest Fyberg.

Two more freshmen, Chris Markum and Per Sandstrom, join returning senior Jerry Bernier and juniors Jayson Hebert and Kris Orrok to round out the seven-member boys' squad.

Like the girls, last year's boys' team finished in the middle of the pack. Bernier and Hebert were in the top 15 of classical and freestyle state competition, respectively.

Remington sees Mt. Blue, Fort Kent and Oxford Hills as the top team competition in Class A, while Mountain Valley, Edward Little and Skowhegan look to be strong in the combined cross-country and alpine competition.

But he's still optimistic about the Rebels. "The girls as a team look the best we've seen in quite a while, and the boys I'm best in a couple of years," Remington said.

Alpine

It's been over 15 years since Beth LaVallee last coached the skiing Rebels. She returned to Telstar as a guidance counselor after spending the 1980s at Oxford Hills. She was an alpine coach for the Vikings as well.

LaVallee did not immediately take on coaching responsibilities at Telstar, because of concerns the guidance work load might be too great.

But now settled in guidance, she's also stepping into the coaching vacancy left by Tom Remington.

"I'm really excited about it," LaVallee said. "I enjoy working with them (the skiers)."

Her team of 19 includes a dozen boys and seven girls.

Lacking history with them, it's difficult for LaVallee to speak in depth about the skiers. She's confident overall, however.

"They're a very competitive lot -- they aren't afraid to go fast. I think we'll see some solid performances. I'm looking for them to be better than the middle of the pack, both boys and girls."

The lineup includes, for the boys, seniors Tim Adams, Jason Billings and Jerry Bernier; juniors Jay Home, Matt Koskela, Eric Mills and Grayson Wakefield; and sophomores Matt Hiebert, Chris Vaughan, Sam Sayen and Vern Inman.

The girls' team includes junior Dani Littlehale; sophomores Malinda Gilbert, Vicky Coolidge, Toni Vacca and Julie Burgi; and freshmen Becky LaVallee and Gail Aloisio.

"I think some of them will stand out, while others will progress as the season develops and gain in confidence," LaVallee said of both the boys and girls.

LaVallee is assisted by Sunday River racing coach Fred Cowins, whom she also sees as a great asset to the team. "He's enthusiastic, he's an expert, and he's more than willing to share his expertise," she said.

Cold-Related Injuries

by Christopher J. Lake, MD, Emergency Medicine and Family Practice Physician, Mountain Health Services, Berlin, NH

Staying active and enjoying the outdoors may be the secret to happily surviving the long winter months ahead. The secret to enjoying cold weather activities is to stay warm and avoid cold-related injuries.

Cold-related injuries comprise two general categories: Cooling of the periphery—those structures on the outer surface of the body, such as fingers, toes, arms, legs, ears, nose, and skin; and cooling of the body core or inside of the body, termed hypothermia.

Peripheral cold injuries include both freezing and non-freezing syndromes. Frostbite is the most common freezing injury and occurs in varying degrees of severity. Frostnip is the term given to the mildest form and results in numbness and tingling that goes away after rewarming. Trench foot or immersion foot are injuries resulting from the prolonged exposure to wet and cold at temperatures above freezing and involves destruction of small blood vessels resulting in a pale, painful, and swollen foot. Trench foot was a common injury to combat troops in the trenches where feet remained cold and damp for long periods. Nonfreezing injury following repetitive exposure to dry cold at temperatures that are above freezing is termed chilblains and results in itchiness, redness, and swelling of the skin.

Peripheral cold injuries described above occur because blood flow to the surface of the skin changes as skin is warmed and cooled. Less blood flows at cooler temperatures, because the blood travels to the inside of the body to keep it warm. Extremities, such as fingers and toes, get cold as a result. At temperatures below freezing and especially under wet or windy conditions, such as on a snow machine, ice crystals form in the layers of skin. With this, destruction of the layers of skin can occur and if not treated properly or soon enough permanent damage can result. The symptoms (what the patient experiences) of frostbite vary depending on the severity. Numbness to touch, pain, and temperatures occurs initially. Clumsiness and a limb that feels like a "chunk of wood" is a common complaint. When the limb is rewarmed and blood flow returns, it can become very painful. Signs (what can be observed by others) of frostbite vary depending on the severity. Frozen tissues will often appear mottled, white, pale yellow or waxy. The skin may feel hard and may be difficult to roll over the bone. Erythema, or redness, may occur with rewarming. Skin that becomes violet-colored after rewarming may mean that a more serious injury has occurred.

Treatment should be performed in a hospital and involves rewarming in water followed by elevation, dressings, and prevention of infection. Rewarming of frozen extremity in the out of doors should be avoided, because if the limb freezes a second time the severity of the injury is increased and the potential for loss of limb increases.

Dressing properly is the key to staying warm. How much clothing you wear will depend on how active you are. The principals of dressing for cold weather, however, remain the same: use insulative layers such as wool, down, or synthetic fibers. Do not use cotton when the aim is to stay warm and dry. Carry on, if necessary, wear a protective outer shell that is resistant to wind, rain and snow. Wear proper foot wear to keep feet warm and dry. Mittens are generally warmer than gloves. So if you have a tendency to have cold hands, wear a good pair of mittens. Wear a hat to protect ears and avoid heat loss from the head. Remember what your grandmother might have told you: if your feet are cold, wear a hat. If more extensive outings are planned, be prepared to spend a night outside should you or a party member become lost or injured. In addition, staying hydrated by drinking a lot of water helps to prevent cold related injuries. Maintaining an empty bladder helps to reduce the calories needed to warm the body because the volume of fluids is on the ground and not in your body. And finally, fuel your body with energy-rich foods. In a cold environment, the body requires more food for energy. Ensure that enough food is available and do not, under any circumstances, plan on dieting when in the outdoors.

So, get out and enjoy this winter, be safe and, remember, when the cold weather gets you down, warm water is less than half a year away, or a short flight south.

When Is Drinking a Problem?

News USA

(NU) - Have you ever felt you ought to cut down on your drinking? Have people Annoyed you by criticizing your drinking? Have you ever felt bad or Guilty about your drinking? Have you ever had a drink first thing in the morning to steady your nerves or get rid of a hangover (an Eye-opener)?

These four questions, represented by the initials of key phrases, comprise the CAGE questionnaire, the most widely used screening tool for detection of alcoholism.

Although many adults experience few, if any, problems from drinking alcohol, others experience negative consequences. When alcohol problems persist, they are classified as one of two clinical disorders: alcohol dependence or alcohol abuse.

Alcoholism is distinguished by four main features: craving, impaired control over drinking, physical dependence and tolerance. Alcohol abuse is a less serious disease, referring to problem drinking that falls short of loss of control but results in health consequences, social problems or both.

Each year, alcohol abuse and dependence affect about 15.3 million adult Americans. As a 1993 report from the Department of Health and Human Services of the Substance Abuse and Mental Health Services Administration notes, many people such as co-workers, parents and members of our communities have been touched directly or indirectly by the problem of alcohol.

The overall toll taken is tremendous, contributing to half of deaths due to traffic accidents, almost one-third of all suicides and 40,000 annual deaths due to medical consequences.

Risk factors for alcohol abuse and dependence include gender, age, family history and ethnicity. Research has shown that men are three to four times more likely than women to develop drinking problems. However, data from a recent national survey conducted by the Division of Substance Abuse at the University of Miami shows that alcoholism prevalence among women may be approaching that among men.

Teens who begin to use alcohol before age 16 or those with antisocial behavior are more likely to develop drinking problems, while some ethnic groups also have been shown to be at increased risk for developing drinking problems.

A new study provided further evidence that those with a family history of alcoholism have almost three times the risk of developing alcohol dependence. The same study indicated that those who are at greater risk of developing alcoholism show less response to alcohol's effects.

Why some people become dependent on alcohol while others do not is not entirely clear. It is understood that alcohol affects the normal activity of certain neurotransmitter systems in conveying information to receptors at nerve cells throughout the brain. Alcohol dependence may be related to a deficiency in one of these neurotransmitters.

While alcoholism is a chronic disease that cannot be cured, it can be treated and is not indicative of a personality disorder or a character flaw. Comprehensive rehabilitative services are the traditional treatments for alcoholism. In addition, there are two medications available to help treat alcohol dependence.

If in thinking about yourself or about a friend or family member you answered "yes" to even one of the above CAGE questions, consulting with a physician is advised. For information on a medication and a referral to a physician in your area who has experience in treatment for alcoholism, call 1-800-487-3842.

Ask Your Doctor About the Flu

Q. How do you tell the difference between the flu and a bad cold?

A. The flu is usually more severe than a cold. Influenza comes on suddenly and is almost always accompanied by a high fever, severe body aches, chills and cough.

Q. Does a flu shot really prevent you from catching the flu? When is the best time to get vaccinated?

A. Vaccination is the No. 1 method of flu prevention. It is about 70 percent effective in preventing illness from influenza viruses in healthy adults under age 65. The optimal time for people to receive a flu shot is from early October through mid-November.

Q. Once someone gets the flu, can it be treated?

A. Yes. Two prescription antiviral agents, Flumadine (rimantadine HCl) and Symmetrel (amantadine HCl) actually help stop the virus from reproducing in the body, reducing its severity and shortening the duration of the illness.

Pennacook folks from hereabouts

By STUART MARTIN

When Deacon John Cushman of Bethel came to Rumford for his bride (1809), Parazina Howe, he became the first of many Bethel young men to do likewise. At about the same time Parazina's sister, Lois, married Enoch Abbott of Upton and settled there. All through the 19th century there were many marriages between the young men and women of Bethel and Rumford as shown by the records of both towns. The lineage of hundreds of the present population of these two towns reach back into the ancestry of these people.

In 1812 Elijah Bartlett chose for his wife, Nancy Graham, the daughter of Joshua, Rumford's first town moderator. Moses Cummings married Juliette Barker and Phineas Stearns wed Betsey Martin. Peter Kimball, son of Samuel, chose for his wife the daughter of the celebrated school teacher, Abel Wheeler. Elias Bartlett went to Rumford for both of his wives, first Eliza Adams, who died young, and then Judith Bartlett. Another Bartlett, Ephraim, wed Hulia Richmond in 1835.

Major Gideon Hastings, one of Bethel's celebrated citizens, in 1847 wed Dolly Kimball and a few years later Richard Frye, son of the Honorable William and Lois, chose Esther Martin for his bride. Others were Alvan Godwin and Arabella Kimball; Eliphaz Bean and Sarah Farnum; William Goddard and Joanne Curtis; Loretta Bartlett and Charles H. Kimball. Another Hastings, Timothy, entered matrimony with Betsey Smith in 1872. It is also noted that many Rumford young men went to Bethel for their wives. James Godwin in 1814 married Apphia Segar. In 1817 Otis Howe chose Elsie Andrews, one of the 13 children of Jeremiah and Elizabeth. There were many other such instances.

During the early years of the 19th century the area consisted of the villages of Rumford Point, Rumford Center, Rumford Corner and a settlement nearer the Great Falls, where the paper mill is now located. From these villages and farms young men also went to Andover for their mates.

One of the first weddings was Moses Adams of Andover to Dorcas Farnum in 1812. In 1817 another Farnum daughter, Azubah, became the wife of Edward Poor, and a little later her sister, Asenath, wed Samuel Poor. Other marriages were Polly Martin to Philander Farrington (1827); Nathan Adams of Rumford to Susan Adams (1817); Martha Wood of Rumford to Amos Jordan (1829); and Marcia Ripley to Aaron Abbott of Andover. Other young ladies marrying Andover men were: Lydia Moody to Enoch Abbott (1802); Maria Newton to Thomas Abbott (1856); Clara Howe to Lyman Abbott (1856); Frances Howe to Lambert Newton (1854); Nathan Adams Jr., Rumford's first postmaster (1815) married Susan Merrill of Andover (1817). Like Bethel, Andover's present population has genealogical ties to Rumford.

In his book "New Pennacook Folks, Early Rumford with Genealogy of First Families," first published in 1980 after seven years of research, Stuart Martin traces the ancestry of these first families and how they are interwoven with those of Bethel and Andover.

The work of a good friend, the late Eva Bean, entitled "East Bethel Road," published in 1959, was the motivating force for Martin in his portrayal of early life in Rumford. He refers to the families, farms, tradesmen and the rigors of life in the 19th century.

Out of print since 1984, "New Pennacook Folks" has been reprinted with additions to the first edition.

Rotary Club notes:

This is an extremely busy time of year for the Bethel Rotary Club as the club members actively demonstrate the mission of Rotary in our community. It is important to note that nearly all of the 40-plus members of Rotary participate in these community projects. Club president Dan Hart has been great at encouraging 100-percent participation. "Service above self" is the Rotary motto.

The Christmas for Children campaign, chaired by Rotarian David Murphy, has raised more than $8,000 to serve 120-plus needy children in the SAD44 area. These monies were raised from a variety of sources including a mail appeal, a contribution from the Taste of Bethel, the Gould Academy student and staff cookie walk; Telstar Middle School student penny collection and two weekends of bell ringing outside of Bethel Foodliner. Many, many thanks to everyone who contributed funds for this great program that means so much to so many families.

The Community Service committee, chaired by Rene McGrew, organized and held the very popular Senior Citizen Christmas Dinner, serving 119 Bethel area seniors. This event is a lot of fun. Many thanks to all those Rotarians who helped and who donated gifts.

The biannual Rotary Pancake Breakfast, held this past month on Dec. 1 at the Gould Academy dining hall, served 161 hungry folks. Many thanks to Gould Academy for the use of their facilities and to all those who came and ate and at the same time helped to support the many Rotary programs. Club participation in this event was awesome.

Rotarian David Preble once again chaired the annual Rotary Club Citrus Sale. Rotarians successfully sold $6,600 in fruit, an all-time record. Profits from this sale go toward Rotary Scholarships. Many thanks to all the Rotarians who were great salespeople and also to those who purchased citrus.

One of Rotary's holiday traditions is to make Christmas food baskets for 20-25 needy families throughout the SAD44 area. Rotarian Ted Davis has organized this project for many years and the SAD44 bus drivers are the messengers. Many thanks to all who help with this project. Another of Rotary's traditions is to set up, take down, maintain and store the "Manger Scene" for the Living Nativity. Thanks to all who pitched in on this project.

The members of the Bethel Rotary Club would like to wish everyone the very happiest of Holiday Seasons.

RURAL HOUSING FUNDS

The Rural Housing Service (RHS), an agency of the Rural Development Mission Area of the United States Department of Agriculture (USDA), has guaranteed loan money available for rural housing loans, according to Rural Development state director Seth Bradstreet.

"Our fiscal year allocation for these loans is $25 million for the state of Maine," Bradstreet said. There are more than 30 private lenders throughout the state currently making guaranteed rural housing loans for up to 100-percent financing. Low interest rates and 30-year terms can make home ownership affordable to persons who could not otherwise obtain mortgage financing. Since RHS guarantees the loans, lenders have less risk, and the cost to taxpayers is substantially reduced.

"Houses must be in rural areas, but there are very few areas in Maine which are ineligible," said Dale Holmes, RHS program director. The agency expects to utilize the full $25 million for the program. In addition, it expects to obtain additional funding from other states which do not fully utilize the program. RHS processed in excess of $37 million in guaranteed rural housing loans in this program last year.

Interested persons can contact the RHS office in Lewiston at 784-9391.

Matters of Health

From Boston University Medical Center

COUMADIN: An effective anti-coagulant requiring careful monitoring

I was recently diagnosed with a heart rhythm disturbance called atrial fibrillation, and now have to take an anti-coagulant medication called Coumadin every day, perhaps for the rest of my life. What does this drug do, and why must I have my blood checked so often?

Coumadin, one of the most widely prescribed drugs in the United States, is used by patients with certain medical conditions to prevent or treat the formation of dangerous blood clots in the arteries or heart. It works by blocking the action of vitamin K, which plays a major role in bleeding.

While Coumadin is a very effective drug, it poses some serious risks for uncontrolled bleeding, and therefore its use must be monitored carefully by a physician, according to hematologist Jack Ansell, MD, of the Department of Medicine at Boston University Medical Center.

Blood clotting is essential for human life, as it allows the body to defend itself against blood loss from injury. When a blood vessel is severed, the blood thickens, or coagulates (clots), thereby plugging up the vessel and preventing too much blood from escaping. If blood did not clot in this fashion, even the most insignificant cut or internal injury could lead to fatal blood loss.

However, blood clotting can create problems for certain individuals, particularly those with conditions that put them at risk for "emboli," blood clots that form in the arteries or the heart. Depending on where these clots form or lodge, they can create roadblocks that prevent oxygen-rich blood from reaching essential organs, such as the brain or heart, and lead to life-threatening heart attacks and strokes.

People with heart rhythm disturbances, artificial heart valves, phlebitis (blood clots in the legs) or, in some cases, those who have had a stroke or heart attack, are particularly susceptible to developing emboli. For such patients, Coumadin can be lifesaving.

The danger of Coumadin is that, at certain dosages or under certain conditions, it can prevent blood from clotting when it should. "Because Coumadin's effect varies among individuals, and even in the same individual over time, it must be monitored closely and frequently to ensure that the proper dosage is always being taken," says Ansell.

Many factors can alter the delicate balance of Coumadin's effect on the blood, so patients must keep their doctor informed about virtually any changes in their daily habits or health. These include changes in their diet or consumption of alcohol, illnesses, use of other medications (including over-the-counter drugs), and weight loss or gain.

"Even something as ostensibly healthy as going on a weight-reduction diet (which often includes eating copious amounts of vitamin K-rich foods, such as salads), must be reported to the patient's physician," says Ansell. Patients must also avoid activities that could put them at risk for bleeding, such as contact sports or even skiing.

Coumadin's action is monitored with a blood test that checks the time it takes for the blood to clot. Normal clotting time is about 12 seconds. The optimum time for a patient taking Coumadin should be about twice that, says Ansell.

To ensure that the prescribed dosage is within this therapeutic range, patients just starting the drug must have their blood checked at least once a week for several weeks, every two or three weeks once they are stabilized and, eventually, once a month (if they are stable) for as long as they take the medication.

The most serious risk posed by Coumadin is major (often internal) bleeding, which may require transfusions and sometimes hospitalization. Between five and 10 percent of patients suffer such an episode, which, on rare occasion, is fatal. However, says Ansell, "With good, systematic, well-coordinated care, the rate of major bleeding drops to an average of about two percent."

Symptoms of bleeding that should be brought to a physician's attention immediately include obvious external bleeding from a cut or other injury, as well as signs of internal bleeding, such as black and tarry or blood-tinged stools, pink urine, bleeding gums, or nosebleeds.

Many major medical centers (including Boston University Medical Center, now have anti-coagulation clinics to educate patients about Coumadin and to monitor their doses very closely.

This "Matters of Health" was written in cooperation with Jack Ansell, MD, a hematologist in the Department of Medicine at Boston University Medical Center. Readers with questions about Coumadin, or those who wish to discuss other health issues, may contact the BUMC Health Connection, at 617-638-6767. DOING SOME MINING—Jim Mann of Mt. Mann Jewelers in Bethel recently opened the "Crystal Cave" in the basement of his shop. Children can pick quartz, feldspar, mica and other area rocks and minerals from a trough in the cave, which is dimly lit to simulate a mine. Here, Patricia Blachut, 9, and Paul Gaudreau, 7, of Bethel check their finds against an identification chart at the cave entrance. (Photo by Alison Aloisio)

From the UM Cooperative Extension:

Traditional Goes Healthy

Do you want to learn how to alter your favorite recipes to make them healthier? "Traditional Goes Healthy" is a two-part program, offered by the University of Maine Cooperative Extension in Oxford County, designed to help participants reduce fat, salt, sugar, and calories, and increase other valuable nutrients.

"Many people have recipe boxes stuffed with their old family favorites, but these traditional recipes are typically very high in fat, salt, sugar and calories," said Wendy Legg Pollock, Extension educator and presenter of the workshop. "With today's focus on nutrition, people often want to alter the recipes they know and love rather than use new cookbooks full of unfamiliar foods. Traditional Goes Healthy is designed to help people make those healthier alterations."

The program will be held on Thursdays, Jan. 23 and 30 at the Extension Office on Olson Road in South Paris. Two time slots are offered: 9:30 to 11:30 a.m. or 6:30 to 8:30 p.m.

The workshop is open to the public, free of charge, but preregistration is required. Call the Extension office at 743-6329 or 1-800-287-1482 to register by Jan. 17.

FRUIT ORDERS

The second fruit order of the season, offered by Rumford Point Church, must be placed by Jan. 5, with the expected pick-up date from 3:30 to 6 p.m. on Jan. 15 at the Rumford Point parsonage. Prices: navel oranges, $18.25 (case), $9.50 (half case); grapefruit, $15.75 (case), $8.25 (half case); Honeybell Tangelos, $12.50 (half case only).

The third order must be placed by Feb. 2 for expected pick-up on Feb. 12.

The fourth and final order must be placed by March 2 for expected pick-up on March 12.

To order, call Barbara Burns at 364-7604.
